HAPPY NIGHTS IN PERU.

We have just had one of our usual noctes buenos (happy nights), writes a correspondent from Peru. A special national fast and prayer-day generally closes with one of these evenings, called noctes buenos, as if to make up for all the rigors of the religious observances. As soon as the dusk gathers over the streets and houses, little booths and ba-zars, of striped canvas stuff, are hastily rected on poles, all around and in the public squares, and, by the light of torches, all the native eatables, and wares are exposed for sale, surrounded by admiring crowds. Here squats a native at it woman, swarthy of face and limb, and with a bright colored turban surmount-of ing her black hair. On a fire of sticks and embers of charcoal, glowing red in an old copper pan, and bubbling in a queer little black pot sitting over the coals is the strangest conglomeration of messes—peppers and potatoes, cheese, milk and tish, butter and eggs, and bread crumbs, which is sold to the nativeswho crowd around her, served on tin plates (being fished out of the pot with a hollow shell) at so much a plateful. And here are the native liquor stands, chica and aquia, and pisco and italie-sll standing in red brick calabashes, and having a taste similar to peanuts and corn, and pineapples and grapes, and rhubarb. And then the toys—such quaint little dishes, and of such curious construction-little red vases, and kettles and cups, all of the same red brick material, and hardly fit for an Indian baby to play with; huge rattles, that whir and whiz and sing with a rasping, buzzing sound that sets your ear - dumb to aching, and causes one to hold his head and escape from that locality as speedily as poss ble. And every child has a red calabash and a rattle; and the noise and crying of children, and barking of dogs, and crying of the different wares by their nders, are positively deafening. And then to close this noctes buenos evening, a padre addresses the people at the close of the evening in the public square admonishing them against the sins of drunkenness and gambling, etc., while not one of the vast native crowd is suf-ficiently sober to understand his language, and about his rostrum gambling tables and dice, roulette, trentsum and fare abound.

THE EMPEROR WILLIAM'S ILL-NESS.

Writing of the conflicting accounts which have recently appeared respecting the illness of the Emperor William (which he believes is more serious than is generally supposed), a Berlin correspondent relates the story of a world apparation, the appearance of the Honouvallera handly, and which has been seen shout the royal palace. The New York Bulletin of February 4th has The New York Bulletin of February 4th has a communication from a regular correspondent in Mobile, who is answered for as good authority, from his scund experience as a cotton merchant. As Mobile has not shown a prosperous front in the cotton business this year, it is not surprising to see a Mobite merchant take a peemish view of things. The present state of the cotton market, however, is so indetexminite—the falling off of receipts during the week, though significant, not present state of the cotton market, however, is so indetexminite—the falling off of receipts during the week, though significant, not being decisive, that we are not, at present, prepared with the figures to prove his estimate incorrect; he says: "Now, everything leads us to count not only upon a four million crop, but upon a large excess over and above that figure, Our factors are making the same mistake this year which they were guilty of last season, that of judging the whole vast south from the circumjacent country bordering upon the ports, which has suffered more than any portion; and they still labor under the short crop delusion. From all the accounts I have been able to gather, it is now an undeniable fact that there is an enormous accumulation of cotton in the interior, as is partially indicated by the stock at inland centers, as well as by the receipts there; hence all doubts have vanished as to the continuance for some time longer of heavy receipts, which will swell our available supply from day to day greatly in excess of what has been the case for many a year past." This writer says, also: "The best thing written on the subject is the annual circular of W. C. Watts & Co., of Liverpool." The commendation is well deserved, and it may be of interest to state that our brother of the same excellent firm is established on Front street in our city, in the produce business; and another brother has a branch house of the same establishment in Cairo. The Watts's are estimable men and intelligent merchants.

OF MEMPHIS

The City of Augusta, from Wittsburg, arrived with 20 hales of cotton and 272 sacks of cotton seed. The Pat Cleburne brought 186 bales of cotton and 1824 sacks of cotton seed. The Pat Cleburne brought 186 bales of cotton and 1824 sacks of cotton seed. The Grand Tower arrived with 2315 dry barrels, 991 sacks of grain, 80 casks meat, 100 wet barrels, 174 kegs beer and 49 bales of cotton for St. Louis. The St. Francis came in with 62 bales of cotton and 253 sacks of cotton seed. The Arlington cleared after dark with 365 bales of cotton for Cincinnati. The Thomas Sherlock, from New Orleans, arrived at dusk, discharging 20 barrels molasses and leaving for Cincinnati with 100 fons freight. She will endeavor to return here in time for Mardi Gras. The Clarksville went out for Arkansas river with the best trip of the season. Other local packets had good trips. The big wharfboat disturbs the serenity of the Ledger snoozer, and as he is desirons of having it moved, Sam Williamson will this morning fasten his terrier purp to it and carry it to Cairo. Passengers desiring excursion tickets should apply to Jim Durff early as she will doubtless have all of her staterooms engaged before departing. The Bandock City lies over for repairs until Tuesday, when Captain Tom Bowman will take her to St. Francis river in place of the City of Augusta.

Yesterday was clear, warm and bleasant. The mud dried considerably under the influence of Old Sol and a gentle wind, and traveling on the levee was not as disagreeable as during the previous three or four days. A fall of six inches was noted by the gauge, and a rapid decline may now be looked for. Al the upper rivers continue to recede, while Red river has a rise of seven inches. White, St. Francis, Little Red and Little Black continue in good boating condition. Business was a decided improvement over previous days of the week, with a marked increase in freight for White and Arkansas rivers.
